rearticulation by second-wave feminists, particularly Gayle Rubin, to show that kinship has traditionally been anchored in the traffic in women. Reading recent paradigmatic texts that help frame this, she reveals that in contemporary Europe, East European migrant women are exchanged to engage in labor customarily performed by wives in the institution of marriage. Tracing a pattern of what she calls "Americanization," Parvulescu argues that these women (especially become responsible for the labor of reproduction, a fascinating cultural shift, as much about the consequences of the movement of women as women's mobility. The Traffic in Women's Work questions the foundations of the notion of Europe today.
